The Celebrity Holiday Hotel Hopping Continues

We're not haters or anything, but we've had to endure reruns and all types of holiday delays. And then we had to get back to work on the 2nd. Hell, some of us working stiffs didn't get much vaca at all. So, we're just wondering why these celebs still seem to be taking a break. Do they not have movies to shoot? Tracks to record?

OK! We admit it--from the pics we're seeing we're just jelly we're not in their spots. So we'll once again just live through them. And seethe from afar.

Madonna and her brood (including her 25-year-old boyfriend Brahim Zaibat) headed to the resort town of Gstaad, Switzerland, for New Year's. It seems Anne Hathaway and new hubby Adam Shulman were around for the holidays, too. While the Material Mama spent time attempting to ski and bit the dust a few times, it seems 16-year Lourdes was smoother on the snowboard.

Architectural Digest's editor-at-large Jeffrey Slonim posted on his blog some choice gossip about Angelina Jolie had about a dozen nannies with her during her holiday stay at Parrot Cay resort in the Turks and Caicos. Apparently, this led to even more tongue wagging that perhaps there was a weddin' going on while the family stayed at Donna Karan's private home on the island, called Serenity.

But, we don't believe they got hitched—after all, they've already been married 1,000 times already. Still, if there was a place to do it, that place would be it. We've seen it ourselves and while we're not sure how much “serenity” one would have with all those kids and nannies—we'd die trying.

Jessica Alba showed off a super-lithe body (some are saying too skinny) and a mini orange bikini yesterday while vacationing at a Cabo San Lucas resort with daughters Honor and Haven.

Meanwhile, Jennifer Aniston surely wouldn't have been on the guest list to see Brad tie the knot because she followed Alba's idea and headed to Mexico herself over the holidays with her fiancé, Justin Theroux. She stayed at the private El Dorado resort, before inviting friends John Krasinski and Jimmy Kimmel over to hang.

Seems like the only one who didn't head to a beach destination was Korean rapper Psy, who was seen leaving the trendy Mark Hotel yesterday, bundled up and ready to look for some sexy ladies, maybe?
